

Nike Nivar Ortiz is a Program Officer at the American Council of Learned Societies. As part of the US Programs team, he supports a number of fellowship and grants programs including the ACLS Fellowships, the ACLS HBCU Faculty Fellowships and Grants, and the ACLS Community College Research Fellowships, among other programs and initiatives. He received his PhD in Comparative Studies in Literature and Culture from the University of Southern California with a focus on Latin American Studies and Media Studies. Prior to joining the ACLS, he was a postdoc at the University of Southern California teaching across the departments of Comparative Literature and Latin American and Iberian Cultures.